“Going on a Quest ...” The Quest continues

Dr Edith Wallace began the development of the tissue paper collage method more than thirty years ago. Her quest went on throughout her long life and she shared this search for meaning with many others. Though she has now passed away the quest continues, still developing into new forms as we understand it better and as more people join in the journey, which she explains below.

“Going on a quest so often means ‘seeking, not knowing what,’ or ‘going not knowing where,’ because necessity and yearning compel...

There is a center in us which, if we could but open to it, would give us direction, strength, wisdom and the capacity to live our creative potential. Connection with this source gives our lives presence and vitality. Our creativity depends on it. The connection is hard to attain and to maintain, yet we are forever seeking it. Like most truths this potential is hidden. It is the treasure hard to gain, but there are means and methods for making contact with it and for keeping the channels open...

During these playshops we will use simple art mate-rials to open and build channels to the depth of the psyche, to what Jung calls the Self. No previous knowledge or artistic skill is necessary. Just bring a wish to play and enjoy color. We will use the medium of collage to reveal the guidance that can come from within ourselves.

This can be done non-verbally and unselfconsciously as we enjoy a “playshop” built out of moments of playful discovery and confrontations with beauty. There will be a time for movement sessions which will be integrated into the rest of our work...

Participants are asked to write the story of their lives as myth or fairy tale before they come to the playshop. This is an important part of the preparation for the event and these stories will provide a basis for revelations that may arise during the playshop...

“What we have known and done before has laid the foundation for what we can do and recognize now. We are embarked on the River of Life. We need to learn navigation... sometimes while stargazing, never forgetting that as long as we are human beings on this earth we must be skillful navigators and well grounded on dry land. Earth is considered the feminine, Sky the masculine. The dance of life is the marriage of the two...

Creation is not an innocent act! It is the beginning of history and of the possibility of evolution. It would be the end of innocence if, from the beginning, this creative process did not happen over and over again. It always starts with innocence, the fool’s road, demanding the courage to take risks, to experiment with the unknown.”

“Going on a Quest...” Opening to the Creative
A Continuation of Dr. Edith Wallace’s Playshops Facilitated by Karen Stefano M.A., L.P.C.

Santa Fe, New Mexico

Friday August 4 – Wednesday August 9
Karen Stefano is an artist and practicing psychotherapist. She has worked and trained with Jungian Analyst Dr. Edith Wallace for over 20 years. She is one of the few individuals qualified to continue the work with the tissue paper collage method developed by Dr. Wallace. Karen has worked with groups in a variety of settings which include Gurdjieff/Fourth Way, psychodynamic and median approaches. She has trained with Dr. Patrick de Mare in Median group process and worked with Dr. Gordon Lawrence in Social Dreaming Matrix. Karen is a co-founder of the DuVersity, a non profit educational organization devoted to building bridges between psychology and spirituality.

“To prepare for this event, begin the search for what feels like your roots. Use the writing of the myth or fairy tale of your life story as the beginning of your quest.” — Dr. Edith Wallace
